Elephant in the room: a city-park elephant, with the caption "An elephant in the room."
Donation continued from B1

Donated to the Contemporary Austin to facilitate a new collaboration between the museum and the Waller Creek Conservancy, the private nonprofit spearheading the $14 million Waller Creek project along Lake Austin. Since then, the museum has added significant outdoor artworks to its collection as well as committed more than $1.5 million to the Conservancy.

Donation continued from B2

Weather continued from B1

The State Board of Examiners of Professional Counselors meets Wednesday at the Travis Building. The board continued to discuss rules changes and rule proposals. A new rule has been proposed to allow counselors to be able to handle more clients while they are traveling. The board is moving on to discuss a rule requiring an in-person visitation at least every four years.

Primary continued from B1

HAYS COUNTY

Sheriff Gary Cutler won a decisive victory over a long-time political rival in the Republican primary for sheriff.

Sheriff Tommie Ratliff was defeated in a runoff election against Democratic challenger Roxxie Shary, 57 percent to 43 percent. Ratliff had entered the race as the incumbent sheriff, but Shary won the runoff.

Ratliff's campaign had failed to attract the kind of support that had bolstered his re-election chances in 2014.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.

Cutler, a Democrat, had switched parties to run as a Republican in the primary.

Cutler attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff, who had switched parties to run in the Republican primary, said he was not in the race to win and was not commenting on the results.

Ratliff attributed his victory to his handling of a complaint against his predecessor, Sheriff Mike Henderson, who won the Republican primary in 2014 and was appointed to finish Ratliff's term when Ratliff died.

Ratliff's campaign had raised $1.5 million, while Cutler's campaign had raised $100,000.